PREFACE.

This Directory of Federations is the first ever published. Subsequent editions may be made more comprehensive and more perfect.

Definitions.

At the outset it was needful to fix upon certain definitions in accordance with which organizations should be, or should not be, included in the list. The following definitions have been in mind:—

(1) A State Federation is an inter-denominational body, the members of which are elected, or otherwise officially appointed, as representatives of the denominational organizations within a state.

Emphasis is here placed upon the official and denominational character of the membership. A voluntary organization, composed of persons who assemble on their own initiative, is not a federation, even though these persons should all be officials of different denominations. It is needful that the denominational organizations by some act of their own create, or authorize, their representation.

(2) A Local Federation is an inter-denominational body the members of which are elected by the membership of several local churches, or are appointed by Committees or Officials of these respective churches, duly authorized, as representatives of the entire church.

In this case the entire church is emphasized. A combination of Men's Clubs may be called a Federation, and may exercise the functions of a federation; but it should not properly be included in the list of church federations. The church includes male and female, young and old; and any organization, or union of organizations, the membership of which is limited, as to sex, or age, or special function, narrower than that of the entire church, is not included in the list of federations. They are partial federations. At a later time it may be desirable to assemble and publish the names of such bodies. A few are now given in the Appendix of this Directory.

(3) Local Churches, under the spirit of federation, have now taken on four distinct forms:—

a. The Denominational Church. Because of its connection, through its denominational organizations, with world-wide tasks of evangelization, this church alone fully meets the New Testament ideal of a church equipped to carry out the Master's plan of preaching the Gospel to every creature.

b. The Multi-Denominational Church, or The Federated Church. This is a church in which two or more denominational churches, without sacrificing their separate existence and denominational connections, unite for the maintenance of common worship in one congregation with one pastor, and in the maintenance of other church services and affiliated societies.

c. The Inter-Denominational Church, or The Church of Federated Christians. This is composed of individuals united for local church purposes who do not sever their membership in denominational churches elsewhere, but maintain a dual church membership.

d. The Undenominational Church, commonly known as The Union Church. This is purely a local church, sustaining no denominational connection itself, the members of which also are without denominational connection.

Number of Federations.

This Directory contains the names of one hundred and thirty-four federations, twenty-one of which are State Federations; ninety-seven, City Federations; and sixteen are County Federations. Massachusetts has more federations than any other state, twenty-five in number, including the State Federation. New Jersey has six city federations and seven county federations. Pennsylvania reports six city federations and six county federations. New York has a state federation, eight city federations, and one county federation. California and Ohio are next in order each reporting six city federations and a state federation. One federation is here listed in the city of Honolulu, Hawaii. Thirty-three of the forty-eight states of the Union, or two-thirds, have federations within their borders, and at least five other states have federations in process of formation.

Dates of Organization.

The oldest federation is the Christian League of Methuen, Massachusetts, dating from 1887. The oldest state federation is the Interdenominational Commission of Maine, initiated in 1890. Of one hundred and seventeen federations which give the date of their organization, ninety-six, or 82%, were organized in the years 1909 to 1913, the five years immediately following the organization of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. In the year 1912 thirty-five federations were organized, twenty-one are dated 1913, nineteen in 1911, eleven in 1910, and nine in 1909. One is included which was organized in January, 1914.

Names.

A great variety of names appears in the list. League occurs twice, Union twice, Association once, Commission three times, Council seventeen times and Federation one hundred and one times, while seven times the simple word "churches" is used preceded by a qualifying adjective such as Federated, as "The Federated Churches of——". The following adjectives and nouns used as adjectives, are employed:—Comity, social service, general, protestant, united, provisional state, civic and coöperative once each; Christian three times; the qualifying phrase "of churches and Christian workers" three times; and "and religious organizations" three times; "of churches" is used fifty-two times; "church," qualifying some other noun, is used twenty-two times; "inter-church" occurs thirty-eight times; "inter-denominational" four times; and "federated" ten times. The adjective and noun of most frequent occurrence, therefore, are, "Inter-church" and Federation."

Undoubtedly an injustice is done in this list to the Disciples of Christ, as they are not distinguished in many sections of the country from the Christian Connection. Probably their number should be larger, and that of the Christian Church smaller. These figures represent the returns.

Dormant, or Defunct Federations.

In several instances the federations in this list are reported as inactive. Their names have been included if they still have a Secretary, or other officer, who answers correspondence.

The history of federations, thus far made, indicates that failure, where failure has occurred, has been due to one or more of the following causes:—

(1) Original organization by outside appeal without local responsibility and leadership.

(2) Imitation of an ideal organization, with numerous committees, successful in some other place, but not adapted to the local community;

(3) The adoption of a plan too elaborate and of objects too numerous for the numbers and resources available;

(4) An effort to absorb or supplant organizations and agencies already usefully active;

(5) A too heavy budget of expense;

This Directory of Federations makes it plain that an effort at Standardization is futile. There need be uniformity neither in name, membership, objects sought, nor results actually accomplished. There is no such uniformity.

Classification.

The list of Federations is arranged alphabetically by states; and city and county federations are arranged alphabetically after the state federation. In each case the following facts are given:—the name of the place, the name of the Federation, the name of the Secretary and address, date of organization, denominations included in the membership, the number of churches and denominations represented, other bodies which may be included, the objects of the organization, and the work reported as already done.

Both the objects and the work done are reported in a somewhat formal and stereotyped manner, due to the fact that the Questionnaire, which elicited the information, presented suggestive clauses which in many cases were simply checked up, without fuller statement. It must be borne in mind that these federations are but the formally organized federations in states, counties and cities of more than twenty-five thousand population, save in a few cases where federations are well-known in smaller communities. This list does not touch at all the large number of local federated churches and combinations of churches of villages and rural districts.

The arduous work of gathering these statistics has been done with patience and earnest effort for accuracy and completeness, by the Clerk of the Commission, Rev. Edward M. McConoughey.

Doubtless a considerable number of federations are not included because their officers have neglected to respond to repeated requests for the necessary information.

APPENDIX

Partial Federations

APPENDIX.

Partial Federations.

The following organizations, sixteen in number, are not complete federations. They are voluntary in character, that is, not composed of persons officially appointed by churches or denominations; or they are composed of men only, and therefore are not representative of the entire church. The Men and Religion Forward Movement, and the Laymen's Missionary Movement have occasioned the creation of many men's clubs, and these in not a few communities have become federated. Such federations may bear the name and discharge the functions of church federations, and yet they should be regarded as but partial federations.

The Home Missions Council of Colorado, organized in 1912, has the characteristics of an efficient federation. It lacks, however, authorization and official sanction by the denominations themselves. Its members are home missionary agents and secretaries who have organized as a "Council" on their own initiative and responsibility. This council fits the conditions now prevailing in the State of Colorado.

The list of Partial Federations might be almost indefinitely extended. Organizations composed exclusively of men, or of women, or of young people, or of children, or existing for a technical kind of work, like that of the State Sunday School Association, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the State Conference of Charities and Correction are not regarded as church federations.
